Topics in Geriatrics

Volume 3

Course available through December 2011

An Independent Study Course Designed for Individual Continuing Education

Course Description

Topics in Geriatrics: Volume 3 will offer the course participant an increased depth of knowledge across several practice dimensions. The course begins with 2 niche practice areas; working with older adult drivers and older adults who are obese. Readers will understand how physical therapists can have a role in working with older adult drivers, even if we don't work in a setting with special equipment to specifically rehabilitate driving skills. Readers also will be introduced to the growing area of bariatrics across the health care continuum. In addition, there is an update on the role of the physical therapist in prevention of falls; what the latest research tells us and how we, as physical therapists, work with other team members. Readers also will gain insight into how physical therapists are successfully integrating public health in everyday practice and what physical therapists can offer in the public health arena. In the final 2 monographs, the reader will come away with a sound foundation to prescribe exercise for older adults and integrate the definition of "successful aging" into their practice. What does that mean for you and your practice area?

Learning Objectives

Upon completion of this home study course the participant will be able to:

1. Understand the role of the physical therapist when treating the older driver.
2. Evaluate and formulate treatment strategies including equipment needs for older adults who are obese.
3. Provide evidence-based falls prevention strategies.
4. Define the role of physical therapy in public health.
5. Prescribe exercise to the older adult using evidence-based guiding principles.
